Notes

1. active_fedora-noid is now noid-rails (Justin Coyne) - https://github.com/samvera/noid-rails/pull/78
   - a. valkyrie sprints sorta forced this to be a thing
   - b. next version of AF Noid will now be called Noid-Rails
   - c. Shouldn't be any noticeable impact
2. versions for Valkyrie (Justin Coyne) - https://github.com/samvera-labs/valkyrie/pull/312
   - a. spooky silence
   - b. Proposal in that PR is for an api for versioning
   - c. Comments:
     - i. confusion: it seems like versioning is happening automatically if you upload a file to the storage adaptor with the same file name and attaching resource
       1. response: Justin Coyne agrees, this is whats happening - similar to git protocol
       2. concern that this may version when people don't want it to - Trey Pendragon will leave some feedback
     - ii. go over some new issues in the repo - not sure taking notes on this makes a huge amount of sense... important things will be captured in valkyrie issues in github
3. migration process for Collection Extensions - single process to migrate all collections (steve van tuyl, Michael J. Giarlo, Lynette Rayle)
   - a. Process has been solidifying and have been testing it on Nurax
   - b. Working on lazy migration but had concerns about performance and finding all the things that would need to be touched
   - c. Plan at this point is to provide a small script that will update all of the collections
   - d. Process:
     - i. update gem
     - ii. db-migrate
     - iii. rake task to create new collection types
     - iv. additional script to update collections (run once when updating the code)
   - e. Lynette Rayle is updating instructions now
   - f. Q: is it necessary to add collection types to permission templates
     - i. A: there are a number of places where source type is used
     - ii. logic in the permission templates controller allows you to determine what the collection type is
     - iii. Valkyrie work may conflict, in a way, that suggests a need for a closer look at this approach
     - iv. Lynette Rayle and Justin Coyne will discuss offline and come to a joint solution
